YOU read in the news columns the other day of the death of Cass Gilbert, great American architect. He was popularly remembered as the man who designed the Woolworth building. But to be more exact, he is the man who inaugurated in America the type of architecture for which the Woolworth building stands.

Dictator's Silver Buried in Rosin Is Dug Up by Rebels

McMath Writes Chapter in Crash of Dictator Diaz

FORTUNE'S SOLDIER

Paul Edwards, Mine Head, Served With the Revolutionists

Editor's Note: This is the sixth in a series of twelve letters written by Sam McMath, formerly of Hope, on his experiences along the Mexican border.

Dear Mr. Norton:
A lame shoemaker at Nava, Coahuila conducted a sort of labor agency for El Tule ranch. Whenever he heard of a cowboy or sheep shearer wanting work, he would advance him two or three pesos and sign him up for a period of service.

When a Mexican agrees to work for an individual or corporation and accepts advance pay, Mexican law compels him to fulfill his contract.

While I was visiting at El Tule, Paul Edwards, the superintendent, got word that his agent had four men lined up. When he went to Nava, in his car to get them, I accompanied him.

A few miles out of Nava, we met a wagon loaded with Mexicans enroute to El Tule—skilled workmen who had been engaged to build rock houses for employees. Paul walked clear around wagon and shook hands with every man in it.

A Hardheaded Man

Mexicans are by nature a polite people and appreciate reciprocity. Paul punctiliously observed all the little niceties of social contact. No doubt his thoughtfulness in this respect was another reason for his popularity in Mexico. But when a Mexican crossed him it was a different story. He became hard as steel and relied on a six-shooter rather than a glove hand to maintain his prestige.

A short distance from Nava, the road from El Tule passes under a railroad bridge. It is supported by piers made of squared stones cemented in place. Pointing toward the south end of the structure, Paul said "See that spot, Nappy?" (He called me "Nappy" because I slept so much.) I looked in the direction indicated. A pier showed unmistakable signs of having been badly damaged and half of it did that," he continued, "blew it up with dynamite." You blew it up with dynamite!" I repeated incredulously.

"Yep; had to," was his laconic reply.

Out of the corner of my eye I caught a faint, sheepish looking grin on his face. I waited patiently for further elucidation. Finally he continued.

"Federals were after us. They gave us a good licking at Alamo. We had to fall back to fortifications at Nava, and destroyed bridges as we retreated."

A little cautious questioning brought out the fact that Paul had been a high-explosive expert with his company in the Carranzas army. Whenever the Carranzas captured a town containing a bank, Paul blew the vaults. Money obtained this way was used to purchase army supplies. Trinkets and valuables were divided among officers. Paul had a number of pieces of jewelry that he obtained this way. He presented a tie pin to me that had fallen to him as part of the loot when the bank at Saltillo was blown. The pin was either lost or stolen one night on a Pullman. It wasn't valuable, but I prized it highly because of its history.

Arriving at Nava, Paul got in touch with his laborers, gave them more money to purchase little necessities, and ordered them to be ready to leave for the ranch in a couple of hours. The men proceeded to investigate the money in mesquite and were gloriously drunk when we loaded them in the back end of the over and started for El Tule.

"Shoot First!"

I sat on the front seat with Paul. He removed his six-shooter from its holster and hid it on the seat between us. I was carrying a shotgun hoping to kill a few quails or maybe get a shot at a coyote. Paul cautioned

Minnesota Truck Strikers Stage New Market Battle

MOB RELIEF DEPOT

Woman Beaten, Officer Slapped at San Antonio, Texas

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—(AP)—The city market was converted into a bedlam of noises, flying missiles, and teeming strikers again Tuesday as truck drivers and sympathizers rioted in an area two blocks square. Twenty-five persons were taken to hospitals.

Relief Workers Riot

SAN ANTONIO, Texas.—(AP)—Rioting broke out among dependents of the Harlandale relief station here Tuesday with the beating up of a woman case worker.

A relief officer was slapped by another angry officer and there were general threats from a crowd of several hundred persons to tear the station down to the ground.

Riots in Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS — (AP) — Striking truckmen rioted Monday in the city market where more than two score of their number and policemen were injured as the city's truck strike, marked by the arrest of a Minnesota congressman, threatened to widen in scope.

Thine surging mass that teemed in the narrow district, bristled with riot guns, clubs, sticks and knives as citizens appealed to the National Labor Board to interfere when the bloodiest day of the five-day strike that has paralyzed trucking here, moved toward a walkout of 35,000 building and trade workers.

The appeal for federal intervention was answered at once as the Regional Labor Board received authority from Washington to negotiate a settlement. Empowered to ask the Department of Justice for aid, if its rulings were ignored, the board called in representatives of employees and striking truckers to begin discussion.

Considers Calling Out Guard

Gov. Floyd B. Olson was represented as seriously considering calling out the National Guard to restore order and supervise distribution of produce to citizens.

The guard would replace upwards of 1,500 regular and special policemen deputized to quell disorders arising from demands of drivers for recognition of their union and adjustment of conditions of employment. Seventy-five strikers were arrested.

One policeman was stabbed, a striker was believed to have suffered a fractured skull and the injured taxed the capacity of one hospital in the riot that broke out soon after the arrest of Congressman Francis H. Shoemaker, Farmer-Labor, Minnesota.

Shoemaker, whose troubles with the law here and in Washington, D. C. have attracted widespread attention, was carrying a broom handle and was without tie or coat when he ignored orders to move on at the market place. He was taken to headquarters and charged with disorderly conduct, later being released on bond.

Fighting broke out shortly afterwards and within an hour the law had emerged victorious; the striking truckmen had retreated some to hospitals, others a few blocks distant, and the remainder to strike headquarters where officials of the central labor union had issued a call for a meeting. Hopes were expressed a truce could be effected.

No Trucks Moved

At least 18 policemen and 19 strikers were injured before the melee was quelled. The strikers, however, had accomplished their object. Not a truck had moved out of the market area.

With withdrawal of most of the pickets, some of whom wore football headgear to protect themselves from the policemen's night sticks, strike headquarters announced men had been stationed throughout the city to report any effort by employers to move trucks.

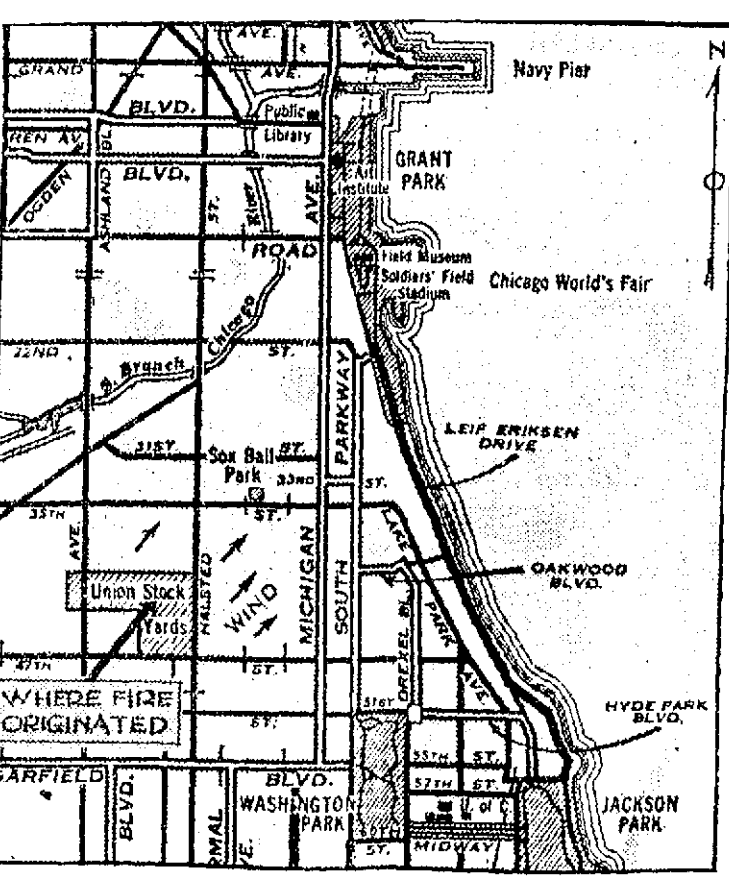

Police vacations were cancelled. Chief of Police Michael Johannes also appealed to the American Legion to recruit 1,500 to serve as special officers.

The 12 private citizens who begged intervention by the National Labor Board, declared an emergency existed and that should the military be called out, possible bloodshed or loss of lives might result.

Broken bones, cracked heads, and bleeding faces were the result of the marketplace riot in which some 500 strikers battled back and forth with the law.

It was this outbreak that precipitated the decision of 35,000 workers in the Building and Trades Council to strike in sympathy. One hundred women and children representing themselves as members of strikers' families begged city officials for withdrawal of special policemen.

Greatest Fire Since 1873 Hits Chicago

ABOVE—Extent of district covered by the Chicago packingtown fire is shown on the above map. Starting in the heart of the stockyards, the flames were carried to the northeast, across Halsted street, into a commercial and residential district, an area of over a square mile. Flames were checked only after a series of dynamite blasts were set off by firemen to raze structures in the path of the flames.

It has been estimated that erosion caused by the fire in the United States and Canada has lost $100,000,000 in destroyed land, loss of plant food, and through other channels.

A great celebration is to be held in July in commemoration of the establishment of the International Peace Park on the border of the province of Alberta and the state of Montana.

Bill Carrying Out Roosevelt's Plan Arrives in Senate

Makes Mandatory 25% Silver Base for U. S. Currency—Bill by Pittman

NEED WORLD PACT

Roosevelt Begins Negotiations With America's Neighbors

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt recommended to Congress Tuesday that it declare the American policy to be "to increase the amount of silver in our monetary stocks with the ultimate objective of having and maintaining one-fourth of their monetary value in silver and three-fourths in gold."

This policy would be mandatory. The president, in fulfillment of his agreement with the congressional silver advocates, said he would be "authorized and directed to make the purchases of silver necessary to attain this ultimate objective."

Take Half of Profit

Payments for the present silver holdings in this country would be limited to 50 cents an ounce, and profits so made would be taxed 50 per cent.

Pointing to a world bimetallic agreement as the ultimate solution of the silver problem, the president revealed to congress that he had already begun negotiations with neighboring countries "in regard to the use of both silver and gold, preferably on a co-ordinated basis, as the standard of monetary value."

Legislation to carry out the presidential proposal was introduced in the senate by E. J. McMahon of Nevada, and swift passage is believed in prospect.

Ask Arms Embargo

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Quick action by congress to grant President Roosevelt authority to stop the sale of arms in this country to Paraguay and Bolivia was requested Tuesday by Secretary Hull in a letter to the house foreign affairs committee. The committee after some discussion gave approval to such a bill.

Final Cotton Report

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The crop reporting board's revised figures show United States cotton production last year amounted to 13,947,000 bales.

L. & A. Fined $502 on Law Violation

Company Pleads Guilty to Full-Crew Law Infraction

Violation of the full train crew law cost L. & A. railway company $502.40 in fines and costs, a decision handed down in municipal court by G. T. Caney, acting as special judge, showed Tuesday.

Thirty-two cases against the railway company were filed, but Judge Caney dismissed 31 of them when attorneys for the railway pleaded guilty in one case.

A fine of $100 was imposed, and costs in the 32 cases were ordered paid upon the dismissal of the remaining 31. Ben, a member of the law firm of Lem & Lemley, attorneys for the railway company caused Municipal Judge W. K. Lemley to disqualify himself in the case.

The railway company was charged with unlawfully engaging in transportation of passengers over its line with a crew of less than an engineer, a fireman, a conductor, a porter and a flagman or brakeman.

Other cases in court this week: Carl Strong, pleaded guilty to drunkenness, and was fined $20 and costs.

Irvin Burns, carrying a pistol, continued until May 28.

W. E. Clark, grand larceny, dismissed upon motion of the Prosecuting Attorney.

2 Insects Plague Hope Melon Crop

Cucumber Beetle and Melon Louse Must Be Controlled

The two insects which cause the most injury to watermelons are the striped cucumber beetle and the melon louse, says County Agent Frank R. Stanley.

The striped cucumber beetle is of more importance in reducing or destroying the stand of seedlings. It can be controlled by dusting lightly with sodium fluosilicate. This insecticide may burn watermelon foliage if applied heavily or when plants are wet, and for this reason it is best to apply it diluted with hydrated lime, using one part of the insecticide by

Thieves Get High School Property Valued at $200

Thieves Monday night raided the high school home economics cottage, carrying away loot estimated at $200.

Every piece of silverware, valued at more than $100 was taken. Other equipment included towels, dishes, cooking utensils, blankets, sheets and a rug which was lifted from the floor.

Entrance to the cottage was gained by cutting a screen and then prizing a lock from a rear door.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Clerk Erk Is Iked and Well He May Be as Plump as Ham Beyond His Reach . . . Congressman High in Air Without Parachute . . . Darrow Ready to Fight for His NRA Review Board.

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Though the sins of Mr. Edmund F. Erk be as scarlet, much may be forgiven him because his feeling are only human and he used to be a congressman himself.

Mr. Erk is only a clerk in Congressman Michael Muldowney's office now. But he yearns for his old House seat, which Mr. J. T. Wing Brooks yanked from under him in 1932 by a mere margin of 140 among 70,000 votes.

So he has written a gooey letter, full of love and kisses, to thousands of voters. He wrote on congressional stationery, implied he was still in the House, told how heavy the recovery program burden rested on his shoulders and begged re-election as a Republican—which he used to be—Democrat.

Several Democratic congressmen massacred Clerk Erk on the floor after Congressman Charles Faddis, friend of Congressman J. T. Wing Brooks, had laid off the denunciation and offered a bill which would make political use of congressional stationery by non-members punishable by $5000 fine and a year in jail.

But just think how you'd feel if you were Clerk Erk! If only 71 of the many voters who swung to J. T. Wing Brooks in the Roosevelt landslide had realized Erk's value, he would be making $10,000 a year instead of $2,900. He would have an office, typewriters, clerical staff, the franking privilege and other perquisites—all paid for by the government—for his political campaign.

His mileage home would be paid, his speeches printed in the Congressional Record for distribution and doubtless would have many congressmen have at government expense—a secretary at home to preserve his political interests.

No wonder Clerk Erk was iked! He avoided prison by putting 3-cent stamps on his letters. That seems punishment enough for any ex-congressman.

He'd Like to Eat His Words
Congressman Francis B. Condon of Rhode Island has a sense of time and place, but sometimes he gets crossed up on it. He introduced a bill which would have the RFC advance $12,000,000 for a privately owned dirigible plant in his state and a couple of big new airships.

He inserted remarks in the Congressional Record so he could issue a pamphlet in praise of the idea. And he issued the pamphlet—just as news broke that the U. S. dirigible Macon had been "destroyed" in a war game and had been considerably damaged.

Darrow Ready to Fight
As if the Darrow report on NRA codes weren't sufficiently embarrassing, the White House now has the problem of whether the eliminate or continue the National Recovery Review Board.

Roosevelt has intimated that he considered the board's work completed, but Darrow and other members of the board don't believe anything of the sort. They think it should last as long as NRA itself and serve as an appeal agency from code authorities for the benefit of small business men.

The only present appeal is to the fellows who made the codes, they say, and code authorities act as legislators, prosecutors, and juries.

The fight over the NRRB's continuance may be hotter than that which has raged over its first report.

Honest Whisky Soon

It won't be long before the buyer of a bottle of whisky can tell just how much alcohol and flavoring and how much real whisky he is getting. The Federal Alcohol Control Administration's labeling regulations are in effect, though it may be several months before bottles on the dealer's shelves are generally labeled, since the law applies only to subsequent bottlings.

There's a story behind the delay in getting the system operating. Distillers pleaded early in April that they hadn't got their labels yet and that immediate enforcement would put many out of work.

FACA asked why no labels. It seemed an NRA code had so curtailed hours that the lithographing industry couldn't get them out fast enough. (Anyways, FACA accepted that excuse and postponed the date.)

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Get Child Into Habit of Retiring on Time—Nothing Should Interfere With His Schedule

Quoting directly from the United States Government Bulletin, issued by the Children's Bureau, the Department of Labor:

"Does your child sleep long enough or soundly enough? Is he rested when he wakes, or is he still tired? Does he go to bed happily every night at the same hour, or does he tease you into letting him stay up late? Does he play hard all day without a rest so that he is too tired to sleep well at night, or does he get a daytime nap as well as a long peaceful night sleep? Does he go to sleep as soon as he goes to bed or does he lie awake turning and tossing?"

"In short, is your child getting all the help from sleep that he should, or is he struggling along on a starvation allowance of sleep?"

Tables for Sleep
Before we go any further, let us look back and review the tables for sleep.

Young baby—20 or 22 hours out of 24.

Baby 3 months old—20 hours.

Baby 6 months old—12 hours at night; 2 hours morning; 2 hours afternoon.

One-year-old—12 hours night; 1 long nap; or 2 shorter naps.

Every little child—12 hours at night; 1 nap or rest.

We can substitute "13" hours for "12" in many cases.

Bedtime before six years should be about 6 p. m.

Bedtime after six years at about 7 o'clock. The hour may be moved ahead slightly as the child grows, but 8 o'clock is not too early for the child of ten. And 9 is a good round hour for those in Junior High or the first year of High School.

A table of sleep is like any other rule for routine care, something that cannot be adhered to perfectly at all times; but being the most vulnerable of all standard schedules, it needs to be emphasized that nothing should interfere with regular hours except illness or emergencies beyond family control.

In spring and summer it is so easy to give in to coaxing. Nearly all children fight bedtime. But now that they are playing harder and longer, they need not only the full quota of sleep hours, but even more.

Avoid Fatigue
As to little children, the daily nap cannot be over-caused. The too-tired child either cannot sleep or will sleep fitfully and uneasily at night.

Habit is the best ally a mother can have. Every child should anticipate his regular bedtime. A half hour before, his exciting play should be stopped. Ten minutes before, bedtime should be mentioned. He won't be jerked willingly off to bed on the instant, so give him just a bit of time. But don't be comfortable, has all of his night supplies and his toilet needs attended to before his door is closed. Then don't allow him to wheedle and whine.

In summer he should be cool, but watch the weather and adjust covers and windows accordingly. Always go in later and see that everything is right. Children sleep better in separate beds. Cots will do if they are level and comfortable.

Too much hot sun will excite some children, and this may interfere with sleep. Watch out for this in the coming months.

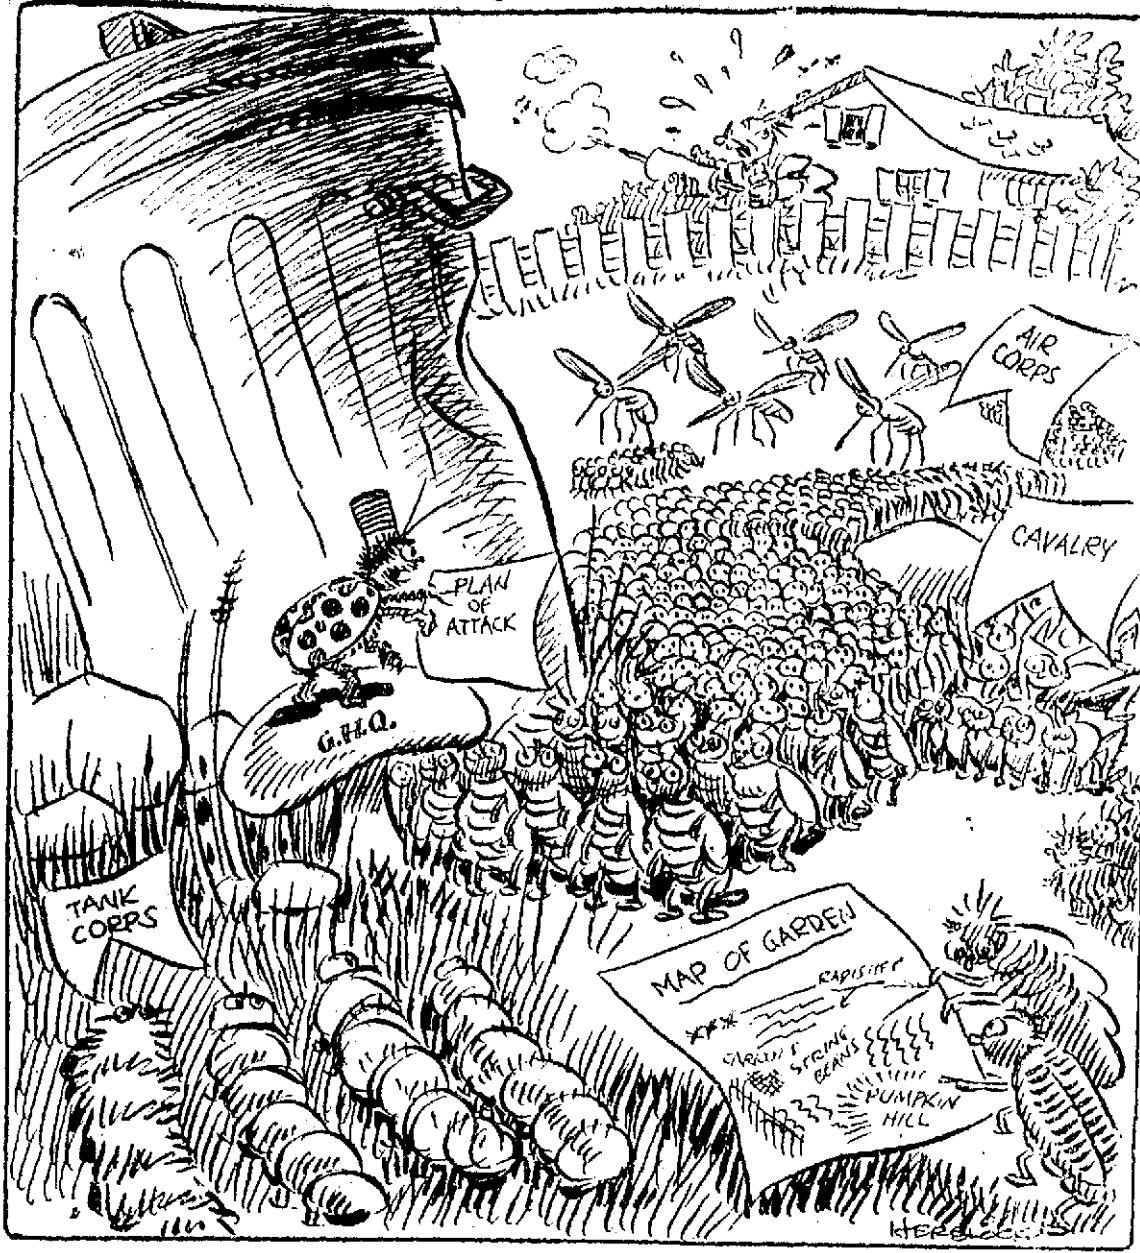

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Eyes, from standpoints of both beauty and health, need an extra amount of care in the summertime. Dust-filled air and sunshine that is too bright are not conducive to eye comfort. The wise woman takes these things into consideration and plans her summer beauty schedule accordingly.

Cleanse the eyes with an eyecup and a good antiseptic eye wash at least twice a day. A weak solution of boric acid is recommended by many physicians but if you like to use a ready-made eye lotion there are several commercial brands on the market today. If there is one line of eye metics that you prefer, try out the eye lotion made by that manufacturer. It probably will please you and you'll have the feminine satisfaction of knowing that the bottle will match your eye cream and lotion jars.

Be careful about exposing your eyes to bright sunlight. If you're going to be on the beach or the golf course without a hat for many hours, wear an eye-shade or dark colored glasses. If you have frequent headaches or a burning sensation around the eyelids, better have your eyes examined to determine whether or not you need glasses. If the doctor recommends them, get them immediately. You may not like the idea but in the final analysis, they'll save you a lot of trouble.

Meanwhile Madeline marries

MRS. PLANTER, housekeeper

Grandfather SidDAI has a

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIII

DOONNA sprang to her feet, her face livid with anger. "You horrible old woman!" she cried.

"You would choose a time like this to say such a thing! And you know it's not true! I'll admit that I was in your room. I wanted to find the handbill because I expected you to use it to back up your damnable gossip. Well, you can go ahead! Tell my husband about the bill. Tell him anything you want to, and see how much good it does you. Do you think

Bill will believe your stories? He knows my partner was married a short time before I was and he hasn't your evil, suspicious mind!

He'll know by the date that the handbill couldn't possibly have anything to do with me. Why, I wasn't even with the circus then!"

"What's this about Mrs. Planter leaving?" he demanded. "Good Lord, Honey, we can't let her go now! With Grandpop needing constant care, the dairy to look after and the meals to cook, you could never do it all alone! What's come over the woman?"

"She was insolent," Donna answered, avoiding his eyes. "I'll manage with the work all right. Send one of the men over to the Jones place to get Minnie. She and I can do everything. And I think we should have a nurse for Grandfather. Surely Dr. Freeman can get one for us."

"He'd have to send to the city, if you mean a trained nurse. And it may take several days for her to get here. Why didn't you wait until things were running a little smoother before you let Mrs. Planter go? I think you're making a mistake, Donna. At a time like this—"

"I'll be all right," Donna interrupted. "Send for Minnie and don't worry, please."

Those were hectic days that followed. Minnie was willing and capable enough in many ways, but the work of managing a household was new to Donna and, with a helpless invalid to care for, she found herself so over-worked and harassed that by nightfall she was too tired, even to talk.

For a week Grandfather SidDAI lay like a block of wood on his bed. There was only the fluttering of his eyelids and his slow, painful breathing to indicate that he was still alive. Donna did what she could to make him comfortable, following the doctor's instructions exactly. Each day Dr. Freeman came out to see the old man, and on the fourth day he brought a placid, efficient, middle-aged woman wearing a white uniform who quietly took charge of the sick man. The arrival of the nurse lifted a goodly portion of the burdens from Donna's slender shoulders.

The girl saw the words, "Saturday afternoon," and nothing else. There was no date, nothing to indicate when the public marriage ceremony was to take place.

Unmindful of results, Donna caught the woman's arm and twisted it around. Using all the strength that had given her the power to swing her body, supporting all her weight by one wrist, she crushed the woman's flesh and muscle until the paper fell from Mrs. Planter's fingers. Then, like lightning, she bent, snatched it up and tore it to shreds.

"Now," she cried triumphantly, "talk! Say anything you want to say, but get out of this house! Get out now! Only be careful that you can prove every statement you make or—so help me, God—I'll have you sent to prison for libel!"

WITHOUT a retort the house-keeper opened the door and left the room. Donna stood holding the scraps of paper in her trembling hands and listening to the woman's footsteps down the hall. She had little time to speculate about the future, for before she had washed the traces of emotion from her cheeks Bill burst into the room.

"What's this about Mrs. Planter leaving?" he demanded. "Good Lord, Honey, we can't let her go now! With Grandpop needing constant care, the dairy to look after and the meals to cook, you could never do it all alone! What's come over the woman?"

She had little time to speculate about the future, for before she had washed the traces of emotion from her cheeks Bill burst into the room.

"What's this about Mrs. Planter leaving?" he demanded. "Good Lord, Honey, we can't let her go now! With Grandpop needing constant care, the dairy to look after and the meals to cook, you could never do it all alone! What's come over the woman?"

"She was insolent," Donna answered, avoiding his eyes. "I'll manage with the work all right. Send one of the men over to the Jones place to get Minnie. She and I can do everything. And I think we should have a nurse for Grandfather. Surely Dr. Freeman can get one for us."

"He'd have to send to the city, if you mean a trained nurse. And it may take several days for her to get here. Why didn't you wait until things were running a little smoother before you let Mrs. Planter go? I think you're making a mistake, Donna. At a time like this—" work fast enough to forget her fears. She tried to tell herself that they were exaggerated, that Mrs. Planter had never really intended to harm her but merely enjoyed making bullying threats.

"I'll be all right," Donna interrupted. "Send for Minnie and don't worry, please."

Those were hectic days that followed. Minnie was willing and capable enough in many ways, but the work of managing a household was new to Donna and, with a helpless invalid to care for, she found herself so over-worked and harassed that by nightfall she was too tired, even to talk.

Besides, the woman was gone now and the circus handbill—the only bit of evidence she had possessed—was destroyed. But such reasoning held scant comfort for the girl. She realized by this time that she had paid too much attention to the handbill. It would have been far better to have treated the matter with calm indifference.

Then Madeline's letter arrived, asking Donna what she intended to do about the farm and the money Amos SidDAI would leave to his granddaughter after his death. Daily Donna had postponed the unpleasant duty of informing the other girl that the old man was seriously ill and that the doctor had small hopes that he would recover.

THE arrival of the letter made Donna sit down immediately to write a long reply. In it she told Madeline all the facts about the old man's illness. From that hour she waited, expecting at any moment the blow that would wreck her marriage.

Donna did not know whether it would come in the form of a letter addressed to Grandfather SidDAI or Bill, or whether Madeline herself would arrive at the farm. But since the other girl was concerned about her inheritance without even knowing that Amos SidDAI was ill, Donna was sure that Madeline would take drastic measures to make certain she did not lose whatever fortune Amos SidDAI should leave. It made little difference how Madeline went about it. Any revelation, Donna felt, would crush her own happiness forever.

And so she waited.

But no reply came from Madeline. Though Donna could not know it, the letter she had written, the letter that might have changed both girls' lives, was never read by Madeline.

It reached New Orleans promptly and was delivered to Madeline's dressing room on the day she encountered Ned Trafford down by the docks. Madeline, arriving late and hurrying to don a hasty makeup for the grand march which opened every performance, saw the envelope but neglected to open it. Subsequent events drove all thoughts of letters from her mind.

Evidently Ned Trafford, after talking to her, had walked out of the warehouse, pulled on his coat and hat and found some means of conveyance to the circus grounds for, as Madeline emerged from the arena and started through the canopied corridor toward the dressing tent, he was standing in the passage.

There was no way to avoid him, no other means of reaching the dressing room, or she would not have risked a second meeting with Trafford. His back was turned to ward her but she could see that there was belligerence in his squared shoulders. And she knew it was no good.

Scanning New Books

When your reviewer was a great deal younger and a whole lot nicer than he is now, he had a book of nursery rhymes in which there was a poem about an oyster; an oyster who was highly educated, but who nevertheless had no brains at all.

This oyster has certain points of resemblance to some of our present-day intellectuals. They are educated, but essentially rather dumb. And if you want to get a good laboratory view of them, you might profitably read Tess Slesinger's new novel, "The Unpossessed."

Miss Slesinger tells about the intellectuals of New York; the owlish profound and completely futile folks who talk and talk and talk and somehow manage to work themselves into the position of being completely disinterested.

Her little clique of serious thinkers is all hot and bothered about the revolution, and they decide to start a radical magazine to help things along. They enlist the aid of a group of ardent young Communist university students, and they get a society woman to finance it; and because they are all so fundamentally dizzy, in spite of their fine words, the magazine never does get off the ground.

For these people, says Miss Slesinger, their enthusiasms are like their love affairs and their gin-synthetic.

They have no guts and no honest background. They're smart and sophisticated, but at bottom they're like the oyster—educated, but brainless.

It's a clever and a bitter book, this. Published by Simon and Shuster, it sells for $2.50.

boy could knock Primo Carnera flatter than a debutante's hips. But plenty has happened since to cause the old champion to change his mind.

Dempsey doubts that Baer can get in shape, and now qualifies his prediction by saying that he'll whip Big Boy provided he can do so.

"Baer drinks, smokes and runs around too much," says the Man Mauled. "He still doesn't take the game seriously. I suspect that the success of his picture went to his head."

"But he can fight if he makes up his mind and buckles down. If he fails to do this and is not in condition, Carnera should win the decision."

I don't think Primo can knock out Max. I don't think he can knock out any half-fair fighter, but he boxes mightily well and can fight all night unless he is hit properly."

Dempsey concludes his current refereeing tour at Memphis on May 15, after which he will move on to New York to help ballyhoo the Battle of the Giants on June 14. Ancil Hoffman, manager of the challenger, insisted that he be cut in, so he is to collect seven and a half per cent for lending a hand in the steam-up.

The creator of the million-dollar gate now wears heavy black shell-rimmed spectacles and continually puffs on a cigarette or a miniature cigar, a habit recently acquired.

Dempsey takes half of the net receipts as a referee and averages $750 a night. He usually works with wrestlers, who have built a new dodge around him.

The villain gouges, knees and elbows his opponent, who makes it plain to the customers that he is doing his utmost to keep his temper and live up to the rules, but with Dempsey present it is unnecessary for the bad man to be pinned to please the trade.

Jack takes care of that, for after the rough hombre presses his rival's shoulders to the canvas, he provokes an argument with the referee. He winds up by making a pass at Dempsey, who stares him like one of those old wiring collars. This never fails to wow 'em.

Until recently, Mrs. Dempsey, the former Hannah Williams, attended most of these performances. They'd stand at the door and autograph things for the folks.

Mrs. Dempsey soon became an integral part of the show. Once when the worrier titleholder was playing a return date in a small California town, his wife, having grown tired of looking

Rubalyat In a Garden

My garden is a chapel. Here the sun strikes through stained windows. Service has begun. A hundred preachers stand in robes of light. And lecture to an audience of one. And here, as in this God-prevailing close, I worship and my spirit gains repose. I find the essence of the law of life. Within the fragrant petals of a rose. Who knows but that the rose may suffer pain? Her day, like mine, is mixed of sun and rain. Could I but offer beauty for an hour. Perhaps, like her, I should not live in vain. Selected.

Dr. and Mrs. Finley Gibson were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Gibson and other relatives and friends enroute to their home in Louisville, Ky. from attending the Southern Baptist convention in Fort Worth, Texas.

Mrs. J. S. Kolb of Clarksville, Ark. arrived Monday for a few days' visit with her sister, Miss Elmina Fontaine on S. Elm St.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Franklin have as house guests Mrs. Franklin's mother, Mrs. J. H. Turner and sister, Mrs. Sid Ralls and children, Bob Ralls and "Buddy and Sister" Rials.

Miss Jeanette Witt who has been a member of the Hazen high school faculty for the past school term is home for the summer vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. P. Witt.

The Womans Auxiliary of St. Marks Episcopal church held their regular meeting at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Clyde Hill on N. Pine St., with the president, Miss Maggie Bell, presiding.

Mrs. F. G. Alverson and son, Dr. F. Alverson and niece, Miss Lois Rogers, who have spent the last few months in this city, left Tuesday for their home in Danville, N. Y.

The devotional was given by Miss Bell, who also read a very interesting paper on the first lenten offering. Following the program the hostess invited the members into the dining room where a delicious salad plate was served with fruit punch.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Chaney had as Sunday guests Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lenz of Little Rock.

The Pre-School Study group will meet at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Orville Eninger at the home of Mrs. Aline Johnson on E. 3rd St. The program subject will be "The development of self-control and what constitutes a good Mother."

We acknowledge the receipt of two very interesting graduation announcements in Tuesday's mail, one from Miss Nancy Elizabeth White, who is graduating from the Central high school of Jackson, Miss. and one from James (Arner) Herbin who will graduate from Hendrix college, Conway. Both of the above named were former pupils in the Hope high school.

Editor of Times Hendrix Speaker

Graduation Address May 29 by Dr. John H. Finley, New York Editor

CONWAY, Ark.—One Hope student is included in the 60 members of the Hendrix College semi-centennial graduating class which will hear its commencement address delivered by Dr. John H. Finley, editor of the New York Times. Exercises will be held outdoors on the campus at 4:30 Tuesday, May 29.

Dr. Finley is one of the group of outstanding men whose visits to Hendrix are a feature of the Hendrix semi-centennial celebration. Others who have already come to the college include the noted educator and author, Dr. John Erskine and the noted physicist, Dr. Robert A. Millikan. Owen D. Young, financier, is scheduled to make a visit early next fall.

Dr. Finley will make the trip to and from Little Rock by American airways. He will be met in Little Rock the afternoon of the 28th by a group of Hendrix alumni and escorted to Conway where he will address the alumni that night at their annual banquet. Tuesday, either before or after his commencement address, he will be shown special courtesies by the newspaper men of the state. Arrangements are in charge of Erwin Funk, former president of the Arkansas Press Association and the National Editorial Association, now Arkansas administrator of the Graphic Arts code under the N.R.A. The academic procession in cap and gown will include the Hendrix faculty and board of trustees. Gov. J. M. Fulton has been invited and probably will be among those on the platform.

Dr. Finley has had a long and eventful life as author, teacher, college president, and editor. His book on the French in America was crowned by the Academic Française and awarded the gold medal of the geographic society of Paris. He has been a professor and lecturer on politics in Princeton and Harvard and president of Knox college, the University of the State of New York, and the College of the City of New York. He was editor of Harper's in 1899 and has been editor of the New York Times since 1921. Twelve American universities, including Columbia, Princeton and Tulane have honored him with the LL.D. Degree.

James Herbin is the only Hope student who is a member of the graduating class. James is majoring in economics. Since coming to Hendrix he has been a member of the Y. M. C. A., the Booster club, the Profile, college paper, staff, the annual staff, and treasurer of the Delta Alpha fraternity.

habitu lend themselves admirably to casserole cookery. Beef, veal, pork and lamb are also good cooked casserole and can be combined with vegetables to make one-piece dishes of merit. With the addition of a molded salad and fresh fruit for dessert, there's your well-balanced meal for all comers.

Broiled meats are handy for delayed meals. But chops and individual portions must be used as soon as cooked. Casserole of fresh salmon and potatoes makes a seasonable two-in-one dish. Or other varieties of fish may be used.

Casserole of Salmon
Two pounds fresh salmon, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 2 cups diced celery, 2 cups potato marbles, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 cup boiling water.

Choose a middle cut of salmon and remove the skin. Squeeze lemon juice over fish. Season with salt and pepper and put in a buttered casserole. Surround with celery and potatoes. Dot vegetables and bits of butter and sprinkle with parsley. Add water and cover casserole. Bake one hour in a moderate oven or until potatoes are tender and the fish leaves the bones. Set casserole in a pan of hot water in a slow oven until wanted to serve.

This rule forms a basic rule for various meat and vegetable combinations. If you wanted to use veal steak you would brown the meat quickly in hot fat before putting it in the casserole with the vegetables and sifted tomatoes instead of hot water.

Negro Questioning Proves Fruitless

Murder of Glenn L. Williams Still a Baffling Mystery

Officers were still baffled Tuesday in their investigation of the Glenn Williams murder mystery as the fourth day's probe of the case got underway.

A greater part of the morning was spent in checking statements obtained from three negro suspects, held in Hempstead and Miller county jails.

No charges have been filed against them.

A fourth negro, believed to be the driver of an automobile seen near the Fulton bridge shortly before Williams was shot to death by a mysterious gunman, was still sought for questioning in the case.

The automobile was later found abandoned on a highway near Hope, only a few hours after Williams was slain.

The three suspects held are: Andrew Smith, Moten Hill and Drew Williams, all of the Red Lake area near Fulton. Each has criminal records.

A bullet, taken from the victim's body, and a .38 calibre pistol discovered at one of the negro's homes, was to leave here Tuesday night to be examined by a ballistic expert.

State Sues Wife of Former Officer

Charges Mrs. J. Lan Williams Bought Building With Public Funds

OSCEOLA, Ark.—(P)—The first suit of this kind ever filed by the State of Arkansas is pending in Mississippi circuit court here to recover half interest in a bank building allegedly bought by Mrs. J. Lan Williams with money the state charges was illegally taken from the state by her husband, J. L. Williams, while a member of the Highway Commission in 1931.

The suit, filed on behalf of the state by Attorney General Hal L. Norwood, represented by special Assistant Attorney General Walter L. Pope, is the result of an investigation made by state Comptroller Griffin Smith. Williams, his wife and Mrs. L. B. Swift are named defendants.

The state charges Williams with having deposited to his account in the Bank of Osceola, of which he was president, $19,000 "belonging to the state and 'impressed with a trust.'"

The complaint alleged that $128,223 of the $19,000 was permitted by Williams to be used by his wife in buying a half interest in a bank building at Osceola, title to which "was taken in the name of the defendant, Mrs. L. B. Swift, for the use and benefit of herself and the defendant, Sally Williams, or Mrs. J. L. Williams."

The state asks that the deed to the property be reformed so as to show Mrs. Williams has a half-interest in it, and so that "said one-half interest be impressed with a lien in favor of the state;—and that said property should be ordered sold by a commissioner to be appointed by this court on such terms and conditions as may appear proper to be made."

Attorney's Race May Be Cut to 2

Delayed Payment by Carter Puts Case Up to State Committee

LITTLE ROCK—Chairman Lee Miles of the Democratic State Central Committee will be asked by Harvey G. Combs, secretary, for an opinion as to whether John L. Carter, former assistant attorney general, qualified properly as a candidate for attorney general in the primary next August.

The check which Mr. Carter tendered in payment of the $112.50 ballot fee shortly before the primary ticket closed at midnight last Tuesday was not honored at the bank on which it was drawn, Mr. Combs said, but several days later Mr. Carter turned over the requisite amount to the secretary the latter said.

The party rules require payment of the fee by candidates for state offices not later than 90 days before the primary. The question in Mr. Carter's case is one which Mr. Combs said he did not wish to attempt to settle. If Chairman Miles' ruling should not be satisfactory to any one interested, the matter may be submitted to the entire committee, Mr. Combs explained.

Two other candidates filed for attorney general. They are Hal L. Norwood, now serving his third consecutive term in the office, and Prosecuting Attorney Carl E. Bailey.

me to keep the gun in readiness for quick action. "These fool drunks might take a notion to crowd us and steal this car," he explained. "If one of 'em makes a suspicious move, blast him wide open."

Fortunately, the men were on a good-humored drunk and gave us no trouble whatever. They didn't even squabble among themselves.

That evening after supper, while sitting in the living room in front of a big fireplace, Paul entertained me with tales of his experiences while in the army.

Like all men of his type, he is, as a rule, reticent about his exploits; but on this occasion, he had permitted his cup bearer to serve too many drinks out of a bottle containing a potent liquid, and to my delight it had made him talkative.

After a rear guard skirmish in which the casualties had been unusually heavy considering the number of men engaged, Paul went out with a detail to assist in caring for wounded. We found the body of a young Federal soldier, a mere lad, lying near a mesquite tree. The boy had evidently been mortally wounded and crawled to the shade of the tree before he expired. A trail of blood and a jagged hole in the neck mutely told the story. He lay on his back, his arms outstretched; his right hand gripped a letter. Paul removed the letter, read it hastily, noted the address, and put it in his pocket. The

English to Oppose Japanese Big Navy

Won't Tolerate Threat of New Domination in Pacific Waters

LONDON, Eng.—The British reaction to the Japanese government's determination to abandon the naval ratio principle at next year's conference is unanimous to the extent that this country will not tolerate Japanese supremacy in the Pacific.

It is also realized that something less than absolute mathematical parity but more than the existing 5-5-3 ratio which give such supremacy to Japan so far is the Eastern coast of Asia is concerned.

She would have the advantage of always operating in or near her home waters with her entire sea power quickly available. Nobody in the British government or the navy wants that to happen, particularly before the Singapore naval base is completed. At the present rate of construction, that completion is still four or five years off.

Despite official recognition of the fact that Japan probably means what she says and must eventually be dissuaded or blocked, there are, however, two opinions in the British cabinet as to what is the most immediate problem.

Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, due to temperament and the now notorious tenderness of his policy towards Japan, wants to go the limit to avoid offending that country in naval matters. Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, because of his desire to carry out a long term Treasury policy for the reduction of taxation, is equally anxious to avoid friction, because heavy naval construction would ruin his program of national finance.

young soldier had written it a day or two before his mother.

Weeks later, Paul's command camped near the village where the mother resided. That evening after supper, tired as he must have been after a long march, Paul mounted his horse and rode six miles to deliver to a grief-stricken mother the last message she was ever to receive from her soldier son.

The Dictator Diaz Porfirio Diaz ruled Mexico with the iron hand of a despot more than 30 years. After his overthrow by Madero, he lit out for France and remained there until death ended his colorful career. Madero was assassinated by men whom he had trusted, and and Huerta made provisional president by the traitors. Huerta was friendly toward Diaz.

When the Carranzistas and Villistas captured Mexico City and kicked old Huerta out, they found a train loaded with household goods standing in the railroad yards ready to move to Vera Cruz. The stuff had been consigned to Diaz in France.

Captain Paul Edwards was ordered to take a few of his men and search the train for valuables. The manifest called for a car of rosin in barrels. That looked suspicious. Paul ordered one of his men to burst a barrel and see what it contained. In a few minutes the soldier returned with pieces of shining metal in his hands. "Captain Edwards," he said, "it is silver."

A thorough investigation revealed that bars of silver bullion had been placed in every one of those barrels and molten rosin poured over them. The cargo was worth thousands of dollars!

Paul reported the discovery to his colonel. Officers of the regiment got together and decided to attempt a big steal. The car was detached from the train and consigned as rosin to a friend of Paul's at Eagle Pass, Texas. The friend was notified of the shipment and requested to get it across into Texas as quickly as possible after its arrival at the border.

Roadbeds and rolling stock were in a dilapidated condition and the car was in transit for days. It finally reached Piedras Negras, the little Mexican city across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass. While Paul's friend was dickering with custom officials, both Mexican and American, a band of guerrillas swooped down on Piedras Negras, captured a locomotive, coupled it to the car of silver and went south with it. Paul and his fellow conspirators never heard of it again. How the secret of the car's contents leaked out remains a mystery.

After Paul had finished telling the story he heaved a deep sigh, shook his head sadly, and said: "Let's go to bed Nappy; I'm sleepy."

I was sad too. S. E. McMATH

Dillinger's Girl Tells of Escape

Evelyn Frechette on Witness Stand—May Reach Jury Tuesday

ST. PAUL, Minn.—(P)—Evelyn Frechette avowed her love for "Mr. Dillinger," the hunted felon in her trial on charges of conspiracy to harbor the fugitive Monday.

Both sides rested soon afterwards. It is expected the federal court jury will get the case Tuesday. She said Dr. Clayton May and Mrs. Augusta Salt are accused of conspiracy.

"You knew," asked George Sullivan, United States district attorney, "that Dillinger was a criminal when you were with him in Florida?"

"Yes, but I got so I loved Mr. Dillinger," she replied, pronouncing the first two syllables to rhyme with "willin'."

From the time of her arrest in Chicago April 8, she testified, she was not allowed by federal operatives to eat or sleep until about 3 a. m. April 12. She denied having told anything to H. H. Reinecke, federal operative in Chicago. He had testified that she had described her movements with Dillinger and said he once placed his fingers under her chin to lift up her head and asked her to "please look in my eyes, Evelyn, when I am talking to you."

"I'd say he hit me," she said under questioning, "and he didn't say 'please.'"

She accompanied Dillinger after he broke out of the Crown Point (Ind.) jail, she testified.

Of the appearance of officers at the St. Paul apartment March 31, she said: "Mr. Dillinger asked me who they were and I said 'police.' 'Well, don't let them in,' he said. 'Come on and get dressed.' I said 'what are you going to do?' He said 'never mind, get dressed.'"

"I was putting some things in a suitcase and he was in the front of the apartment when I heard shooting. I said: 'My God, don't shoot. Go on and leave me.' He said 'No, you are going with me. Get that grip.'"

She told how they drove to Minneapolis where Dillinger was treated in the apartment of Mrs. Salt by Dr. May.

She insisted she does not know where Dillinger is.

Nazis Checked by Coup in Bulgaria

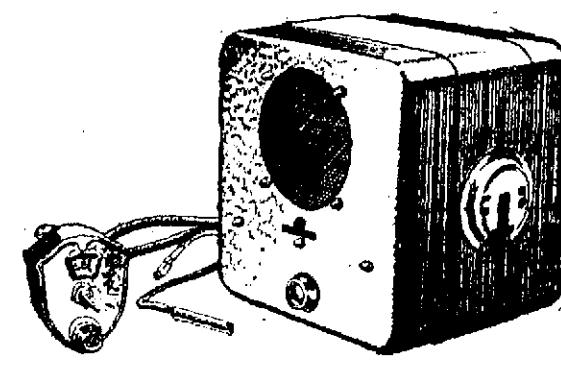

Germany Isolated in Middle of Military Alliance

By the Associated Press. The coup d'etat in Bulgaria, placing in power a group considered pro-French and removing men regarded as influenced by Italy, is looked upon in most European capitals as furnishing the link needed to isolate Nazi Germany in the middle of a military alliance.

The projected alliance of friends of France has been widely discussed. If carried out, the defense chain would touch every border of Germany and would be the strongest European combination since the Holy Roman Empire.

Soviet Russia has given indications that she is about ready to enter the League of Nations, and to join in a mutual assistance pact with France and other powers. The pact would be open to Germany, if she returned to the league, but its purposes would be attained regardless of the Nazi government's attitude.

The fact that Bulgaria's new Fascist regime immediately announced its intention of recognizing the Soviet Union was pleasing to the sponsors of the pact. Russia and Turkey, another nation whose co-operation is believed to be sought, already are friendly.

Darrow Will Hurl a New NRA Blast

Preparing Second Attack on Tendency Toward Monopolies

WASHINGTON—(P)—Clarence Darrow hurled more polished epithets at NRA Monday and announced an intention of submitting another report on the disputed monopolistic and oppressive trends of that agency which he defied its spokesmen to answer.

His statement prolonged the controversy aroused by the findings of the National Recovery Review Board of which he is chairman, that the cods are squeezing out small business men and increasing the power of the great industrial combines.

Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, and Donald S. Richberg, NRA's general attorney, replied that the Darrow report was intemperate Socialist propaganda and demanded that the Review Board be abolished.

To the Johnson and Richberg statements, Darrow replied:

"The monopolists and profiteers that were uncovered by the Review Board's report had, their findings today and with their attorneys, paid and unpaid, filled the air with their clamors."

"This board was created for two purposes only. First, to discover if under the codes monopolistic practices existed; second, to discover if the codes, small enterprises were oppressed. I reached the conclusions, that in certain industries monopolistic practices existed; 2, that in certain industries small enterprises were oppressed."

Darrow assailed the administration for delaying publication of the Review Board's report until Johnson and Richberg could prepare replies. They, he said, apparently regard NRA as their "personal property" and "break into shrieks of rage at the suggestion that operations are not perfect or are susceptible of improvement."

The board's second report, the statement said, would review additional industries in which conditions were "even worse than in those that have severed Mr. Richberg's vision." Darrow said that one question remained to be answered:

"Does the administration wish to be understood as supposing monopolies?"

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Speed of Blood Flow Guide to Disease

Doctors are getting so that they can detect certain diseases by measuring the speed at which the blood flows through your body, using ingenious methods of measuring the rate of flow.

Yet it was only 300 years ago that the actual fact that blood circulates through the human body was established.

Today we know that the heart pumps the blood through the arteries to the ends of the circulation in the capillary blood vessels, and that in these blood-vessels it is re-collected into the veins passing to the lungs where it receives more oxygen and then returns to the heart, to be forced once again through the circulation.

In various species of animals the time required for the blood to go from the heart to some other point in the body and back to the heart again varies.

In one of the methods devised to measure this rate of flow, a small amount of a radio-active substance is put into the blood vessel at one elbow and a detector is placed at the other elbow. The time required for the passage of the radio-active substance from one elbow to the other is taken with a stop-watch.

In normal people the average time required is 18 seconds. Certain kinds of heart disease cause the rate to be much slower.

Other new methods involve the injection of certain chemical substances which produce changes in capillaries when the chemicals reach them. By this newer method the rate at which the blood flows has been determined in a large variety of diseases.

For instance, the time required for the blood to travel from the arm to face in a normal person is about 22 seconds, varying from 19 seconds to 25 seconds. When the thyroid gland is overactive or in severe forms of anemia, the blood travels much faster.

In the latter instance it does so, no doubt, because a larger amount of blood is needed over a given time to nourish the tissues.

When the heart is weak, the blood travels much more slowly. In those cases in which the blood travels more slowly, the patient also is found to be short of breath and occasionally to have attacks of pain in the heart like those of angina pectoris.

Whenever the time advances from 22 seconds to 42 seconds or more, there usually is found to be some swelling or collection of fluid in the tissues. All newer scientific methods call for careful measurements. By comparison of the measurements of functions as they occur in the well with those found in the sick, it therefore is possible to diagnose quite early the existence of certain diseases.

The methods are also used to trace the progress of disease and sometimes to indicate proper methods of treatment.

Mississippi Suit Abroad Is Alleged

U. S. Refuses to Let Monaco File Recovery Action

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The United States Supreme Court ruled Monday an American state cannot be sued by a foreign state without its consent.

The decision, delivered by Chief Justice Hughes, was made in the case of the principality of Monaco which sought permission to sue Mississippi to force payment of bonds issued by the latter about 100 years ago, and which recently had been presented to the principality.

Mississippi refused to consent to the suit, and challenged the jurisdiction of the supreme court to permit the filing of the suit without its consent.

Analyzing constitutional provisions, the court found no specific direct declaration on the authority of a foreign state to sue a state of the union.

Pointing out there was no express provision that the United States might not be sued in the absence of its consent, the opinion declared that by reason of the "established doctrine of the immunity of the sovereign from suit except upon consent," the constitution had been construed as not authorizing the maintenance of suits against the United States without its consent.

Johnson in Denial of Campaign Aid

Chief Justice Asserts No State Employee Was Asked to Contribute

LITTLE ROCK—Two employees of the Highway Department testified before the Highway Audit Commission that they contributed to Chief Justice C. F. Johnson's campaign fund last July. It was shown in depositions made public by the audit commission Monday.

Chief Justice Johnson, in an oral statement after Dwight H. Blackwood, former chairman of the Highway Commission, had charged that the audit commission had not made public testimony concerning contributions to Judge Johnson's campaign fund, said he did not ask any state employee to contribute to his campaign fund and that he such contributions were requested by others, it was without his knowledge or approval.

Blackwood's statement, published Sunday, charged that the employees of the highway department had been asked to contribute amounts to Judge Johnson's campaign fund equivalent to three per cent of their salaries.

The statement was made after the audit commission had made public testimony concerning contributions to Blackwood's campaign fund in the 1932 primary. The testimony of several former highway department employees and some now employed by the department showed that they signed notes for campaign contributions at the request of the late Victor A. Kleiber, former chief clerk and auditor for the department, and that the notes were paid with back salary warrants.

Depositions of W. W. Zass, chief engineer, and J. A. Francis, supervisor or equipment, made public by the audit commission Monday showed that they "voluntarily" contributed small amounts to Judge Johnson's campaign fund, but Francis testified that he had heard several other department employees say that they had been "assessed" approximately three per cent of their salaries.

Francis said he made a contribution only in the campaign because of personal friendship for Judge Johnson and the latter's brother and that he was not solicited for additional contributions.

Federation Leader Sees Improvement

Mrs. Poole Believes World Will Be Well and Happy Again

HOT SPRINGS—(AP)—Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, of Brockton, Mass., president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Tuesday called some 2 million members of that organization to leadership in bringing to a realization social, civic and economic reforms.

"Let us work toward a tomorrow where every citizen of the United States may have the opportunity to make his or her own way, confident that if he does his part he will have protection against a tragic future," she said.

She advised club members to broaden their educational background on all public questions.

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, it was learned Tuesday, will be unable to take the affirmative side in a scheduled debate on birth control. The national-known birth-control advocate is ill in Washington. No substitute has been made for her on the program.

Opened Monday

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—Mrs. George Grace Morrison Poole of Brockton, Mass., president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, entered the ballroom of the Arlington hotel at 6 Monday night to the strains of the Grace Morrison Poole march and the 16th annual meeting of the council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs was under way.

Mrs. Poole was escorted by Mrs. W. F. Lake, chairman of the local council board and general federation director for Arkansas, and other G. F. W. C. officers. They took their places at the speakers' table at the end of the long ballroom where covers were laid for 50 delegates and visitors for the formal opening dinner.

Mrs. Lake presided, and visitors were welcomed to Hot Springs by Governor Futrell, Mayor Leo P. McLaughlin of Hot Springs and Thomas J. Allen, superintendent of the government reservation.

In her response Mrs. Poole called attention to the fact that this is the second time the General Federation of Women's Clubs had met in Hot Springs. The first was a biennial convention in 1918, during the World war. "It was a tense time," Mrs. Poole said. "The allies were not holding the lines but we met with a vision and declared that it should be the last war. As we meet again 16 years later we are again in a world crisis. Thrones have toppled, monarchies have crashed, democracies are in danger and experiments are in vogue. But again we have a vision and believe that the world will be well and happy again."

Mrs. Poole was presented with a gavel made of an apple tree as symbol of Arkansas, whose flower is the apple blossom, my Mrs. S. H. Mann of Forest City, president of the Arkansas Federation of Women's Clubs, on behalf of the federation.
